Citizens take control! New York art isn't very political, but Lisa Kirk has outdone herself this holiday season by spearheading an alternative to the conventional gallery space: a one week, 52-act festival of creative dissent. Less policy, more party. Test your civic endurance by revelling and revolting city-wide with a rooftop gig by art/band/collective Dearraindrop; guerilla installations in parks, subways, and restrooms; and a film screening with giveaways aplenty at the Tribeca Grand, featuring Fischerspooner's Jeremiah Clancy, Mungo Thomson, and others. A number of events are TBA so be on point, or you might just miss the underground's next outing. (AM)
